

BS EN 16001 Energy Policy

Elliott is a leading supplier of building systems throughout the UK. In common with the rest of the assembly and construction sector, Elliott has a significant direct impact upon the use of energy as a result of its operational activities. We therefore need to manage energy consumption, in all aspects of the company's business.

The company recognises it has a duty to help protect the environment for both the present and the future. This 'Duty of Care' is actively endorsed by Elliott and is embodied in a companywide commitment to ensure any energy use is minimised.

In striving for excellence we are committed to continual improvement, both in reduction and minimisation, and compliance with legislative requirements.

Through contact with national government departments, industry regulators and trade associations we aim to be at the forefront of legislative developments. We will continue to develop with the aid new technology, new developments and basic housekeeping of our energy usage.

The company will actively promote the 'Principle of low Energy usage' through the following measures.

Elliott will endeavour to:

- Assemble all products taking into account both the direct and indirect energy embodied in our products.
- Support initiatives that benefit the environment by energy reduction & optimisation.
- Meet and where possible exceed all relevant energy legislation and introduce company standards where legislation does not exist.
- Seek to reduce the consumption of energy in all operations through reduction and control.
- Through our commitment to training, we will educate and motivate our employees to work in an environmentally responsible manner.
- Continue to be a responsible employer and good neighbour.
- Liaise with suppliers and customers to improve the company's energy performance.
- Review the energy objectives and targets of the company periodically.

To meet these responsibilities, the company environmental performance is monitored continually, through individual divisions, at board level and at management meetings. Regular audits and reviews will assess our environmental performance against current best practice. The targets and results will be published in an annual report. Relevant information is provided to our employees, the local community, regulating authorities and other relevant interested parties.
